'Will the policies pay out, or won't they?' - insurers worry more about 'silent cyber'
By Erin Ayres, Advicen
More and more, the threat of cyber exposure creeping into other lines of insurance - "silent cyber" risk, as it has been known - worries insurers more and more, according to a new survey conducted by Willis Re.

IS call for investigation of insider stock sale by Equifax execs
Six lawmakers signed a bipartisan letter Tuesday calling for an investigation into the sale of stock by executives between a data breach at the firm and when it was disclosed.

Never been a better time to freeze your credit
A massive data breach has people reaching for the tool, a move that could have a host of implications for consumers and the financial industry.

In Spotlight

How will blockchain adoption affect cybersecurity?
In a world where every process, agreement, task and payment would have a digital code that could be led, validated, stored and shared. That's the gigantic potential of blockchain technology. On Wednesday, at 11:15 a.m. ET, join SVIA and Advicen in a webinar that will unravel how blockchain can
